

THE NEW YORK TIMES, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 21, 2005

Eric Asimov picks Chateau Pajzos' Tokaji Aszu for his Christmas gift list, calling it "...a revelation":

And Georg Breuer's Gnarre, from the Rheingau, is floral and pleasing, and lively.

The secret pleasures of riesling have nothing on tokaji aszu, the great sweet wine of Hungary. Few other wines can achieve its balancing act of refreshing acidity and sweet intensity. If you know a fan of sweet wines who hasn't tried one before, a 1999 Chateau Pajzos 5 Puttonyos ($47 at Crush) may be a revelation.

This time of year a bottle of champagne is always welcome, especially if it's distinctive and made by a

“The secret pleasures of Riesling have nothing on Tokaji Aszu, the great sweet wine of Hungary. Few other wines can achieve its balancing act of refreshing acidity and sweet intensity. If you know a fan of sweet wines who hasn't tried one before, a 1999 Chateau Pajzos 5 Puttonyos ($47 at Crush) may be a revelation.”